A New Gallian King?

In a shockingly brazen political development, Manfred XXV, King of the Romanoi, Grand Duke of Memmingen, Protector of the Imperial Diet, Count Palantine of the Imperial Fief of Holhauzen, Bearer of the Crown of Limburg, Rightful Heir to the Counties of Borgond, Viscount of Munchar und Pfalz, Marquise of Nordmark, Lord of the Southern Leagues, Herzog of Badenland, Watcher of the Riverlands, Headmaster of the Order of the Sanctified Rose and Emperor of Ulmsreich has offered Duke Antione de Mold III of Normandie the throne of Gallia. We here at the Executive are personally confused as to where the Emperor derives the authority to do so, but we are nonetheless pleased to bring you this exclusive profile of the Duke's recent political history; inside you will find all the juicy details starting with how the Duke's fleets and armies sat on their hands while the last king was fighting for his throne all the way up to him heroically leading Normandie to victory over Breizh off the back of a Franco-Occitanian Military intervention. Read all about it on Page 7.
